Description

The End-of-Life Nursing Education Consortium (ELNEC) project is a national education initiative to improve palliative care in the United States by providing consistent, advanced education on end-of-life care.

This two-day course focuses on the core areas of end-of-life care and includes palliative care; pain and symptom management; ethical, cultural, and spiritual considerations; communication; and preparation for and care at the time of death. Case studies, video clips, personal experience sharing, experiential learning and role play are used to reinforce the concepts taught. Each participant will receive an email containing a link with materials and resources discussed during the course.

This course is based on the End-of-Life Nursing Education Consortium training model previously supported by a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to the American Association of Colleges of Nursing and City of Hope National Medical Center.

Who Should Attend?

This course is appropriate for anyone whose role involves providing care for the person at the end-of-life, and/or support for their families.

- Registered Nurses

Past Participant Comments

"I feel empowered to not fear these discussions as much as before. While never easy, it is unfair to rob a patient and their family of what quality time they have left due to a lack of understanding about this issue."

"This course has deepened my understanding of what role I play on the interdisciplinary team and given me some practical tools for caring for patients, families and staff in difficult circumstances."

"This wonderful training should be a requirement for anyone in a clinical field. We all need to do a better job in educating patients and families about end of life issues and of the difference between palliative and hospice care."
